Proofreading and editing copy

Proofreading and editing copy go hand in hand. The two are complementary activities that take a text from final draft to print- and publish-ready content.

Proofreading involves checking the text for spelling, grammar and punctuation, while editing ensures use of appropriate words, internal consistency and logical structure to improve readability and presentation of the text.

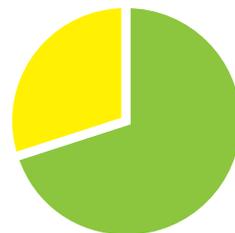

Wordy offers an online editing and proofreading service for everyone – from journalists, businesspersons and academics to marketing people and bankers. We strive to give you the best possible quality and ensure that your content is ready for submission or publication once it's been through Wordy.
